

They founded organizations, they sponsored legislation, they blazed trails and suffered trials. For generations, women living and working in Southern California have defied expectations and surmounted discrimination to increase equality, freedom, and prosperity for their fellow citizens.

On this exploration of Los Angeles' "feminine side," you will be taken to sites associated with the well-known, and often overlooked women of L.A. – places where they left their mark in engineering, journalism, politics, education, law, architecture, aviation, performing arts and more

Toypurina, the Native American Woman who opposed Spanish colonialism in California who has long been celebrated as a figure of resistance.

Bridget "Biddy" Mason, the former slave who became a pioneer entrepreneur, landowner, philanthropist and co-founder of Los Angeles First AME Church.

Julia Morgan not only became the first female architect licensed in California, she was also the principal architect for William Randolph Hearst.

Enjoy lunch on your own at the historic San Antonio Winery Maddalena's Restaurant – named after the woman who helped make this beloved historic landmark what it is today.
